Inclusive Education Through Assistive Technology

Today, the USAID Equal Access for Equal Opportunities project held a roundtable on “Assistive Technology Use in Mainstream Primary Schools: Experiences and Practices.” The roundtable, organized in cooperation with the Municipality of Vinica, brought together teachers, school directors, parents and representatives of education-focused NGOs to review the initial positive experiences of seven primary schools from Kumanovo, Lipkovo, Kriva Palanka, Sveti Nikole, Valandovo and Vinica, and the benefits teachers found in using assistive technology in their daily work with students with disabilities.

“Together with our partner schools, we have demonstrated that assistive technology can improve the education of students with disabilities,” said Lela Jakovlevska, USAID Education Office Deputy Director. “USAID is proud to have supported yet another innovative educational project in Macedonia that contributes to a modern and inclusive educational system.”

USAID’s Equal Access for Equal Opportunities project held a similar roundtable in Karpos, and will hold another in Krusevo by mid-March. The project, implemented by the Open the Windows association from Skopje, works to improve the inclusiveness of the education system for all children and to modernize the education system by introducing information technology in the everyday instructional process. A total of 21 primary schools were equipped and trained in using assistive technology in the instruction.

We plan to continue increasing this amount over the next few years.

The American people, through USAID, have invested over $500 million in Macedonia since 1993. USAID is working with the people of Macedonia to create jobs, strengthen democratic institutions and practices, enhance integrated education, and prepare students for the workforce.
